HOW TO ELIMINATE DISABILITY SERVICES FOREVER

Disability is a community issue and thus we are all stakeholders in the inclusion agenda. A new generation of service users and families are demanding greater choice and quality in service provision.

Melanie Armstrong is a young psychologist working in the disability sector. Frustrated by antiquated ideologies that have impaired the development of this sector, she brings this debate to the public.

The debate unfolds as a mum, a service user, a human resource and business consultant, and advocate and service providers attempt to change the course of antiquated practices across the country.
